Central Pacific Bank & City Bank: Creating a Stronger Locally Based and Locally Managed Bank for Hawaii

Questions & Answers for Employees/Managers
April 16, 2003

1. Why should Central Pacific Bank combine with City Bank?

We want to ensure the presence of a strong, local independent community bank intently focused on Hawaii and the local community.

This combination would help us grow and enhance our ability to compete with the larger banks. It would create a stronger, locally based and managed bank that would provide a real local alternative to larger banks here in Hawaii.

We believe this deal is clearly the right fit for the local community, customers, and shareholders of both banks.

2. What are the terms of the offer?

Based on the April 14th, 2003 closing price of CPB Inc. ("CPB") stock, the $285 million cash-and-stock offer would give CB Bancshares, Inc. ("CBBI") shareholders the equivalent of $70 per share.

This represents a 62.3 percent premium over CBBI's closing price on February 25th, 2003 the day before CPB began purchasing shares of CBBI in the open market, and a 54 percent premium over the closing price of CBBI stock on 4/14/03.

The consideration would include $21 in cash and 1.8956 shares of CPB common stock for each CBBI share.

CPB's board intends to continue a quarterly dividend payout of $0.16 per share. That would represent an increase of approximately 290% or 3.90 times the current payout for CBBI shareholders.

CBBI shareholders would own a stake in a stronger, more competitive, more stable company with a record of superior performance over the past five years and a bigger stake in the future growth of Hawaii.

The proposed combination would create an organization with a pro forma market capitalization in excess of $600 million, with total deposits of $2.8 billion, and a tier 1 capital base of $275 million.

3. How would customers benefit?

Expanded services such as commercial real estate, trust and wealth management, as well as greater convenience with an expanded branch and ATM network.

Larger lending limits.

Increased resources and services for small- and medium-sized businesses.

Continued culture of high-touch and personalized service.

4. Will this affect customer service?

Our focus will always remain on our customers and we intend to keep customer service as our highest priority throughout this process.

5. What will happen to employee jobs?

Our employees are the reason for our outstanding performance and our most valuable resource.

One of our core principles is to be a preferred employer in the community and we hope that employees of City Bank will be interested in positions within our combined company.

We expect some degree of consolidation. But it's too early to discuss specifics since we would first need to sit down with City Bank management to work out the details.

6. What will happen to employee medical and retirement benefits?

Your benefits would not change.

7. What should employees be doing now to help?

Continue doing what you've always done: deliver the highest level of service to customers and do the best job possible.

Express your enthusiasm for our proposal to customers, family and friends. Encourage them to visit our web site to learn more about the proposed combination and how it benefits Hawaii. Review the information provided especially the Benefits Fact Sheet.

8. How would this affect Central Pacific Bank retirees?

We would continue to honor retirement benefits after this transaction.

9. How would this affect City Bank retirees?

We would continue to honor retirement benefits after this transaction.

If they hold any stock in the company, they would receive the same very attractive premium on their stock and higher dividends.

10. How would CPB shareholders benefit?

The combined bank would be larger, stronger and better able to compete. Together, we can provide a strong, local alternative to the mainland managed and foreign-owned banks and be better positioned to meet Hawaii's unique needs and fuel its economy.

We anticipate this transaction will be approximately 10% accretive to CPB's earnings per share in 2004, which we think is based on reasonable assumptions.

11. Why now?

Why not now? This is a terrific transaction that benefits our community, our customers and our shareholders.

This merger has been discussed off and on for a number of years. But with the relatively recent entrance of foreign-owned and mainland-managed banks into Hawaii, the timing is right to create a stronger, locally based and managed bank that's better able to compete.

Hawaii is poised for an economic recovery after years of challenges. Now is the time to combine these two banks to create a stronger financial institution one with the same local roots and values to help accelerate economic growth for the local community.

12. Why is Central Pacific Bank taking this approach?

We much prefer to meet with City Bank to negotiate a transaction, and have tried several times to get City Bank to get together to discuss this very compelling offer, but we're prepared to take the proposal directly to shareholders. It's the right thing to do.

13. How would the community benefit?

A stronger, locally based and managed bank is good for Hawaii. Together, we provide a strong local alternative to mainland-managed and foreign-owned banks and together, we're best positioned to meet unique local needs.

Together, we can provide customers with more convenience and a broader menu of business and retail banking services.

No one is more focused on consumers and small and mid-sized businesses in Hawaii which would help fuel economic growth in the local community.

Capital is reinvested here in the islands.

14. What's necessary to make this merger happen?

The closing of the merger is subject to customary regulatory and shareholder approval and due diligence, as well as the redemption of City Bank's poison pill.

15. How long would this process take?

It's difficult to say for certain because timing depends on so many factors. Subject to customary regulatory and shareholder approval, the redemption of City Bank's poison pill and due diligence, we hope to close by the end of the year.

16. City Bank has suffered credit quality problems in their portfolio. Won't this drag Central Pacific Bank down and expose CPF investors to a lot more risk?

As a percentage of the combined portfolio, these risks are more than manageable.

Combined, we would be a bigger, stronger institution with a stronger balance sheet and greater capital strength to absorb risks, generate loans and fuel growth of the Hawaii economy.

17. Has Central Pacific Bank completed due diligence yet?

We have not had the opportunity to complete due diligence yet. However, we have been competing, head to head with City Bank for decades, and we have a very good sense of their business.

3

18. What would be the cost for undertaking this acquisition?

The benefits in terms of additional earnings would substantially outweigh the transaction costs. But it's too early to know the details of specific costs at this time. We anticipate a one-time restructuring charge related to this combination of approximately $32 million.

19. How large would the combined bank be?

Our assets would increase to $3.7 billion (as of 12/31/02). We would still be the fourth largest financial institution in Hawaii, but we'd be significantly stronger and better able to compete.

20. How would this affect the composition of the Boards?

We have yet to negotiate those details but during the course of our negotiations we will discuss what number of CBBI's directors would be appropriate to add to CPB's board.

21. Would there be any changes to senior management?

We have yet to determine the specific changes to our management structure.

22. What are the next steps?

We hope the next step would be friendly merger discussions with City Bank senior management and its board. But if not, we're prepared to take our proposal to the shareholders of both companies.

23. How many branches would be closed?

We anticipate some branch consolidations; especially where there is duplication within a close proximity. However, we are unable to outline precise initiatives until we sit down and discuss these details with City Bank management.

24. Will the company open more branches?

We would look to redeploy resources to expand into new or under-served communities, such as rural Oahu and Neighbor Islands.

25. Does the combination make the new company more attractive for a buyout?

The best way to ensure Hawaii is served by independent, local institutions committed to our community is for those institutions to be stronger, to have more scale, and to perform well so that investors have the confidence that management can deliver value much as we have over the past five years.
