Spirent Communications plc

Response to letter from Sherborne Investors

The Board of Spirent Communications plc ("Spirent" or the "Company") has noted the statement issued today by Sherborne Investors GP LLC ("Sherborne"). This statement makes a number of points that merit comment.

Points with which we agree

1. Strategy

We note that Sherborne has acknowledged that it has no alternative strategy to propose to shareholders than that already being implemented by your Board...."We (Sherborne) believe it is unlikely that the Company's position will be greatly improved by new and radical strategic initiatives."

2. Corporate governance

We also note Sherborne acknowledges that...."The board structure that we (Sherborne) have proposed is not in full compliance with the best practices prescribed by the Combined Code on Corporate Governance."

Points which we dispute

3. Company performance

Sherborne attempts to persuade you that Spirent is underperforming. The reality is that the Company is in transition against the background of very challenging industry conditions.

Furthermore, Sherborne misleads shareholders in its letter as to the profitability of our core Performance Analysis business. Sherborne states...."it is not healthy for a well-established business such as Performance Analysis to be unable to do much more than to break even with a sales level approaching GBP200 million per year." But the reference in the statement above is to an annualised level of sales and there is nothing in analysts' published expectations for the current year to support Sherborne's assertion. Performance Analysis reported an operating profit of GBP15.9 million on sales of GBP178.8 million for the year ended 31 December 2005.

4. Control

Sherborne states that it is not seeking "to control Spirent without paying a premium". But clearly it is. It proposes to replace Spirent's Chairman, the Chairman of the Audit Committee and the Chairman of the Remuneration Committee and appoint one further director. As a consequence, five of your existing directors would leave the Board. Sherborne would therefore have effective control of the Board. Furthermore, Mr Bramson admitted this objective at a meeting on 14 November 2006 when he rejected your Board's offer to allow him and one nominee to join the Board as it did not give him "sufficient control".

5. Turnaround approach

Having accepted your Board's strategy, Sherborne argues that it is better placed to implement its execution. But this is not the case for two key reasons.

First, Spirent is not the turnaround candidate Sherborne would have you believe. A huge amount has already been done by your Board that rescued the Company from near bankruptcy in late 2002, subsequently restructuring it into its current shape. What is required now is to balance ongoing cost reduction progress with investment in the core business to further strengthen Spirent's competitive position. This is not the task of a turnaround team.

Second, it is not the task of a turnaround team that lacks meaningful telecoms sector experience. Mr Bramson refers today to his chairmanship of Ampex as a key part of his experience. Yet Ampex is not directly in the telecoms sector. Mr Eastman was formerly an investment banker before joining Sherborne, not an experienced businessman who has led major enterprises. Furthermore, neither Mr Walker nor Mr Brindle appear able to claim any experience of managing businesses in this sector.

This lack of experience contrasts with the direct and relevant knowledge base that Spirent will lose if Sherborne's appointees are elected. The five non-executive directors who would leave the board in these circumstances have a strong track record running major businesses and proven experience that is directly relevant to the sector in which Spirent operates.

In summary

Much has been done in recent years to transform Spirent from a company in a precarious financial position to one that is poised to take advantage of this hard work and investment. Sherborne has little to add to the programme that is underway and instead is likely to cause considerable disruption at a key time.

John Weston, Chairman of Spirent, said:

"Sherborne's statement confirms that they have no alternative strategy for the Company and lack the relevant experience to run it better than the existing board. Sherborne's claimed turnaround skills are not relevant to the next stage of Spirent's development and their attempt to take control will, if successful, result in needless disruption. I encourage all shareholders to vote AGAINST the proposed resolutions."
