ITEM 1.01. ENTRY INTO A MATERIAL DEFINITIVE AGREEMENT.

The recently enacted American Jobs Creation Act of 2004 added to the Internal Revenue Code new Section 409A, which, among other things, imposes additional tax burdens on amounts that are deemed under the new rules to be deferred compensation. Historically, in an effort to conserve cash, Oscient Pharmaceuticals Corporation (the Company) has paid 50% of annual employee and officer bonuses in the form of discounted stock options (i.e. options for which the exercise price is less than the fair market value of the Company's common stock on the date of grant of the option). Under the tax rules in place at the time of grant, these discounted stock options were not taxable until exercised. As a result of new Section 409A, the portion of these options that had not vested prior to January 1, 2005 will be treated as currently taxable deferred compensation at the time of vesting. The amount of the option-related deferred compensation that is taxable at time of vesting will be includible in taxable income at that time and the optionee will also be subject to an additional tax equal to 20% of that amount. As of January 1, 2005, there were 27 employees of the Company, including Steven M. Rauscher and Stephen Cohen, the Chief Executive Officer and Chief Financial Officer of the Company, respectively, that held a total of 41,844 unvested discounted stock options.

On February 2, 2005, the Compensation Committee (the Committee) of the Company approved a plan (the Plan) to provide for payments on behalf of the affected option holders to offset the taxes arising at the time of vesting as a result of the new tax law, as well as amounts to cover the tax payable in respect of such payments. The expense to the Company under the Plan cannot be determined at this time because the IRS has not yet clarified how the taxable deferred compensation with respect to a discounted stock option is to be measured. The Plan would not compensate optionees for any taxes incurred with respect to periods following vesting, or upon exercise. Because of these changes to the tax laws, the Company does not anticipate issuing discounted stock options as part of employee compensation in the future.
