Shareholder Advisory Vote on Executive Compensation. Although this was a non-binding advisory vote, our board of directors takes the results of this vote seriously and is considering ways to address this concern.

We believe that the vote against the “say on pay” resolution was primarily the result of votes cast by institutional investors that followed the recommendation of Institutional Shareholder Services (ISS), a proxy advisory service. The ISS report found a “disconnect” between our CEO’s compensation in 2010 and the company’s total shareholder return.

Our board and management fully support the pay for performance principle advocated by ISS and that principle is a cornerstone of our executive compensation program. Our board and management are fully committed to increasing earnings per share as we recover from the recession and thereby positioning Umpqua to increase dividends in the future and create an environment for improved shareholder returns.

In reaching its recommendation, ISS used a formulaic approach, including a comparison of a one year increase in CEO compensation from 2009 to 2010 with total shareholder return over a five-year period. We strongly disagree with this formulaic approach, in two important respects:

1. ISS’s analysis fails to consider action taken by the board that aligned pay with performance during the recession and the impact that the recession had on the financial industry. The Compensation Committee noted the following facts when setting Mr. Davis’s 2010 compensation:
  - Mr. Davis’s base salary was flat between January 2007 and 2010, as Mr. Davis recommended that he receive no salary increases during that period and the Compensation Committee agreed that was appropriate;
  - 2009 is an inappropriate year with which to compare 2010 CEO compensation because it takes it out of context. In 2009, CEO compensation appropriately decreased 28% as Umpqua experienced a loss that year;
  - Umpqua returned to profitability in 2010 and greatly strengthened its capital and liquidity;

- That improved performance was recognized by the Compensation Committee and Mr. Davis's total compensation in 2010 increased 16% over 2008;
  - The Compensation Committee designs the program so that at least 60% of Mr. Davis's compensation is "at risk" and by ISS's calculation, 66% of his 2010 compensation was "at risk";

- While many banks in the northwest were failing, Umpqua positioned itself for future growth with a balance sheet that is far stronger today than it was when the recession began; and
- In 2010, that strong balance sheet enabled Umpqua to acquire three failed banks in FDIC-assisted transactions, assume more than $1.5 billion in assets and build a robust presence virtually overnight in the Puget Sound market.

ISS's approach compared Umpqua's total shareholder return with a peer group that differs from the peer group that ISS used to evaluate compensation. ISS also compared total shareholder return over a five-year period against CEO compensation over a one-year period. We believe that the peer group used to measure shareholder return should be the same as the peer group used to measure compensation and that the measurement periods should be consistent. We also believe that using total shareholder return as the only performance metric distorts Umpqua's compensation program and disregards the important action taken by management and the board during the recession to ensure the strength and the future of the company.

2. ISS's model to value CEO Davis's option award differs from Umpqua's model and is inconsistent with applicable accounting guidance. The ISS model overstates the value of that award by $245,250, when compared with Umpqua's model, which has been in place for a number of years and is consistent with both SEC and FASB guidance.

Umpqua's management and Compensation Committee will continue to have constructive conversations with our shareholders, and look at ways to more closely align executive compensation to total shareholder return in 2011. Mr. Davis fully supports the action that the Compensation Committee is taking.

Frequency of Say-on-Pay. The proposal to approve, on an advisory basis, the frequency of the advisory vote on the Company's executive compensation program, was approved with the following votes:

	Voted	Percent of Voted
1 Year	72,495,687	82.2%
2 Years	992,463	1.1%
3 Years	12,072,521	13.7%
Abstain	2,590,851	2.9%
Broker non-votes:	14,434,372	---
