Dear Brooks Automation Employee,

Today we announced very exciting news for Brooks Automation: the signing of a definitive agreement to acquire Helix Technology of Mansfield, Massachusetts. This important strategic business combination of two highly complementary companies will strengthen our position as a premier supplier of integrated automation systems for the semiconductor industry. By combining with Helix, we believe we will be able to better serve our current market, increase our addressable market, reduce the volatility that both businesses have historically faced and position us to enhance our financial performance. As a result, we will be well positioned to build greater value for our employees and stockholders as we leverage our combined products, technology, and global service and manufacturing expertise to meet the needs of our combined worldwide customer base.

Attached is a copy of the press release that was issued announcing the news.

By combining with Helix, we are creating a company with a market capitalization of more than $1.1 billion (based on the closing price of Brooks' stock on July 8, 2005) and trailing 12-month revenues of more than $720 million, making us the largest subsystems supplier in the semiconductor industry in terms of revenue. We believe this transaction will also open up new growth prospects and provide increased stability for the company.

Under the terms of the agreement, Helix stockholders will receive 1.11 shares of Brooks stock for each Helix share they currently own. There will be no change to the shareholdings of Brooks shareholders. The combined entity will continue to be known as Brooks Automation and our headquarters will remain in Chelmsford. Management of the combined company will include executives from both Brooks and
