Item 8.01 Other Events.

On September 22, 2011, SIGA Technologies, Inc., a Delaware corporation (“SIGA”), issued a press release announcing that the Delaware Court of Chancery (the “Court”) has issued its post-trial opinion in the litigation commenced by PharmAthene, Inc. (“PharmAthene”) in 2006. The Court denied PharmAthene’s contention that a draft license term sheet attached to the parties’ 2006 merger agreement was a binding license and denied PharmAthene’s request for specific performance of the alleged license. The Court ruled in PharmAthene’s favor, however, on its claims for promissory estoppel and breach of the duty to negotiate a license agreement. The Court, after acknowledging that PharmAthene did not establish a right to any traditional form of relief on these claims, awarded to PharmAthene an “equitable payment stream” consisting of 50% of the net profits that SIGA achieves from the next ten years of sales of ST-246®, its smallpox drug, after the first $40 million of net profits goes entirely to SIGA.
